NEW ABSTRACT:

A system and method of encrypting digital content in a digital container (120) and securely locking the encrypted content to a particular user and/or computer (125) or other computing device is provided. The system uses token based authentication and authorization proceedure and involves the use of an uthentication/authorization server (160). This system provides a high level of encryption security equivalent to that provided to that provided by public key/assymetric cryptography without the complexity and expense of the associated PKI infrastructure. The system enjoys the simplicity and ease of use of single key/symmetric key cryptography without the risk inherient in passing unsecured hidden keys. The secured digital container (120) when locked to a user's device (125) may not open or permit access to contents if the digital container (120) is transferred to another user's device. The digital container provides a secure technique of distributing electronic content such as videos, text, data, photos, financial data, sales solicitations, or the like.
